

THE FATAL FLYING GUILLOTEENS

The very name incites response. A hurried rhythm amongst eager lips utter the call...

Four men have designed a program to raise the bar on the rock dynamic and make with new directions. "The Now Hustle For New Diaboliks", the latest Guilloteen offering, functions as an eleven step blueprint to dismantle the tired rock aesthetic.

These four men who began in Texas, disguised in face masks and fringe, operating under the moniker of the "Guilloteen" quickly established a presence amongst the lone star circuit. Notoriety shadowed the Guilloteens by means of countless manic performances, the likes of which remain unrivaled. An anything goes fiery floor show of lurching fury lit like a firecracker earned a loyal following, ever increasing in their numbers.

These self proclaimed "new revisionists" perceive themselves to be men of reference and not of emulation. To invent rather than to borrow. To operate outside of conventional ways which would explain the dirty hybrid of wretched southern twang and panicked modern science that has become that signature "black sheep" sound.

These lads have since shared the stage with the likes of such famed phonemes as Sonic Youth/Lord High Fixers/The Rondelles/Country Teasers/And You Will Know Us By The Trail Of Dead/and the Fireballs of Freedom to name a few.

Funding for previous releases as issued on seven inch formats have been donated by such interests as Peek A Boo Industries/Twistworthy International/and Estrus Centre o d' Artes. Guilloteens co conspirators that have often contributed to live performances as well as studio tinkering include, CJ Drag of The Drags and Tim Kerr. Mr. Kerr whom of which returns to the helm at Sweatbox to develop and deliver this years threat...
